CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

T S Kaladharan

No one can dispute the fact that our business sector is constantly and rapidly evolving. I am therefore particularly proud that, over the past twenty-five years, CSS has gained recognition as a global leader in international transport and logistics. We are honoured to have achieved this, even more so because it highlights our core belief of maintaining strong values of discipline dedicated to providing high-quality service.

Growing businesses face many challenges and CSS is no exception. However as different opportunities and problems demand distinct solutions, one thing is for sure, such challenges provide development outcomes which should confirm that a business is on the right path for growth. Personally, I believe that, in this context, talent management strategy is one of the dominant prerequisites. It's a must for any growing business.

It's well known maxim that we are all happier when we feel we are able to achieve our best. This means placing the right people in the right place so they are able to utilise their maximum talent. Obviously there are many factors that influence this process. Nowadays, whilst the skills of 'Human Resources' have gained significance, CSS has endeavoured to inculcate their disciplines since our inauguration. The strategy of talent management is a process that cascades from the top to the bottom line. Meticulous understanding of each person's abilities is a must and it provides a linchpin for 'Human Resources'. This is something we have been doing, within CSS, for years. For some 'Human Resources' only recently came into prominence but, ensuring that the right people are in the right roles and have the right capabilities; has always been important for CSS. It's part of our characteristic spirit that has not only stood CSS in good stead but also will serve us well ahead for our future growth.

CSS HOMEWARD BOUND JOIN HANDS WITH PEBA

CSS Homeward Bound, the renowned packing and relocation company based in Dubai, announced its partnership with PEBA (Philippine Expats Basketball Association) on June 11th, 2019. The ten-month sponsorship deal with PEBA will give CSS access to more than five thousand of its members in the UAE. The marketing alliance is a strategic move undertaken by CSS Homeward Bound who have recently launched a marketing campaign targeting Overseas Filipino Workers in the UAE.

Dr. Britto Satheesh, GM of the CSS Homeward brand under the CSS Group said, "In recognition of the contribution of the Overseas Filipino Worker, we decided to create a special marketing offer on the Balikbayan Box for those who want to send back special items to their loved ones. This took a life of its own when we saw its success amongst our Filipino clientele prompting us to further our commitment to the Filipino community. PEBA is an ideal platform for CSS Homeward Bound to reach the 5000+ Filipino members that the organization holds."

In connection with the contract signing, Homeward Bound and PEBA had jointly organized a media launch at the "Somewhere Hotel" in Dubai on 11th June 2019, in which some of the prominent names amongst the Media and social media influencers participated. During the event prizes were given out to influencers and vloggers who have been putting the event on live. Ajay Krishnan, COO of Freight Forwarding – CSS Group added, "Our foray into the Balikbayan space has been long coming. The association with PEBA is a significant boost to our efforts to add value to the OFW community here in the region, what we intend to do in the UAE is only the beginning of an organized product that we will eventually roll out to the rest of the GCC origins."

PEBA (Philippine Expats Basketball Association), is currently the biggest and longest running basketball association in the United Arab Emirates due to its successful community support and various charity programs not only in Dubai but also in the Philippines. PEBA has initiated an all year-round sports plan for the region which has been designed to ensure that basketball, the most popular sport amongst Filipinos, continues to have an increase in its status and opportunities in the region.

TO SOUTH AMERICA FROM THE MIDDLE EAST

■ CSS PROJECTS TEAM MOVE MI-8 CHOPPER TO ITS DESTINATION

It was yet another feather on the cap of the CSS Dubai team when they successfully executed the shipment of Mi-8 chopper from the Middle East to South America, recently.

The whole process of transportation was done for the Mi-8 helicopter using modes of transport, which included Air, Land and Sea to get it to its final destination in South America. Mi-8 helicopters are medium twin-turbine helicopters with capabilities of passenger transportation and was airlifted from the origin point in the Middle East to DWC Airport via IL-76 aircraft. The fuselage and the tail rotor were dismantled and loaded on the aircraft using the onboard cranes and offloaded the same way once the aircraft arrived at DWC Airport.

“It was a meticulously planned and executed project from our side, and high expertise is needed for such movements. Every point of the move has to be carefully studied before preparing the blue print. Our prior experience mattered a lot in the successful execution of this job. Thanks to the team who took part in this job” Commented Anita Jaikrishnan, Manager, Special Projects.

Once the fuselage and its dismantled parts were loaded on low bed trucks, it made its way to the CFS of CSS in Jebel Ali. The CSS crew was ready with all of the necessary equipment to cross load the unit onto a 40’ Flat Rack and other gear for the different parts of the helicopter, viz, the rotor blades, engines etc. The unit was then loaded onto a 40’ Flat Rack, after which, the professional lashing team got to work, securing the unit with belts and chains before finally giving it a proper wrapping with a reinforced tarpaulin before sending it off to the port.

SEE LIFE FROM A DIFFERENT ANGLE

FRANCOIS WOLBERG

Director
Global Textile Logistics (GTL)
C.H. Robinson

The business of freight forwarding is a truly international one. Not just do we ship goods from numerous countries, but our industry allows us to travel to new countries, embracing new cultures, and eating new types of food. Or sometimes we are at our desk interacting with colleagues from other places that we may not meet but whom we deal with on a regular basis. Our clients and colleagues are just as unique as the countries they are from, and it is important for us to know who they really are. The world is global, and it's increasingly harder to navigate. To help us, we need to look at things from a different angle.

Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, WhatsApp and all the available technologies have been fantastic at allowing us to be in contact with the world in an instant. We are emailing each other hundreds of times, talking to each other often on the phone during conference or individual calls, and exchanging many texts, but do we really know who is on the other side?

The interpersonal relationships we build with clients and colleagues is an important one. In today's international work environment, this relationship building becomes more complex. Our clients and colleagues are unique and we need to recognize this and take time to learn about them. When talking to a colleague or client from another country, take a chance to ask how their daily commute is, how long it takes, which mode of transportation they are using, how challenging it might be. Ask them about their main holidays, their rituals, or anything you would like to know. Take the time to simply ask how are they doing today. Listen to their replies. These conversations written or spoken will help you to better understand the country and the people you are dealing with every single day and this effort will go a long way in building better relationships with each other.

If you travel to or even have meetings in your home country with people from Egypt or the Middle East in general you need to know you should not shake hands with a woman and you will often kiss a man on the cheek to say hello. Egyptians love to negotiate and a meeting can become very colorful as both parties try to get the best deal. If you are offered a drink you should never refuse; they are likely to be offended and you may lose the opportunity to close a deal. Do not show the bottom of your shoes when you sit down to talk to someone as it is a huge sign of disrespect. After the meeting, when your counterpart walks you to the door or the elevator, take this as a really good sign - it is one of respect and means the meeting went really well.

If you travel to India you will quickly learn that a meeting can take a long time as there is a ritual you must respect if you are looking to close the deal. Sometimes your first sight will be many pairs of shoes sitting outside an office. Do not ignore this, as it means the host wants you to take your shoes off prior to coming in. It is a sign of respect based on his religious beliefs. Once in, it is common to make small talk. Then talk about what brings you there. Refreshments and snacks are next, and do not say no! Most of the time you will have to use your hands instead of utensils when you eat. Do not be offended, wash your hands and do the best you can. Finally the meeting will conclude resuming what was discussed and what action and follow up shall be taken. Follow this simple protocol and you are certain to be appreciated for it.

When dealing with people from France, be aware of a few things prior to engaging in a negotiation. French people in general have a tendency to say "no," right off the bat, requiring you to move the "no" to a "yes" if possible. You must prove yourself. Do not be discouraged and keep introducing your services and be passionate in what you believe. French and Europeans in general are very loyal so if you succeed to convince your eventual new customer or colleague you will keep him for a long time. Lunch is a religion in France so do not hesitate to invite your interlocutor. This gesture can go a long way to gain the respect of your future or current client.

Every country, region, and city in the world have their own traditions and rituals, and it is impossible to learn them all. But, it is important in our business to try to understand our clients and colleagues the best we can, as any effort you make will be noticed and appreciated. You will see your relationships and partnerships with your colleagues, vendors or customers strengthen. Be curious, ask questions, be respectful, be knowledgeable about your business, and educate yourself about them. Knowing our clients and colleagues from a different angle is extremely important and you will be rewarded for trying more you can imagine.

EVERY MAN DIES; BUT NOT EVERY MAN REALLY LIVES!

Mamta Rani
CSS Delhi

Before the battle of Stirling bridge (11th sept,1297), William Wallace, who was leading the Scots, gave a powerful speech to motivate his soldiers. A few words from his speech are as quoted below – “We all end up dead, it’s just a question of how and why. Every man dies, not every man really lives. I am William Wallace! And I see a whole army of my countrymen, here in defiance of tyranny. You’ve come to fight as free men.....and free men you are. What will you do with that freedom? Will you fight?”

As a matter of fact, these words demand attention by each one of us, as we are also supposed to fight at every moment in life, with challenges, problem, people around us, and also with ourselves! The point of concern in this 24x7 battle is- whether we end up dead or alive? Every time when allow negativity, fear, hatred, jealousy, anger, greed etc. to take hold on us, we are rendered as dead! However, when we are brimming with positivity, enthusiasm, courage, confidence, etc. while combating such battles, we come out alive! Verily, in this choice lies our real freedom. Yes, we are the sole decision- makers for our lives, to choose life or death for our existence.

No one wants to be the person that dies without living. So, people must find something that gives their life meaning, whether it’s being a great friend, sibling, parent, grandparent, teacher, neighbor, etc. Once people have found something to live for, they’ll live better. If it’s not relationships as a central purpose, maybe its occupation or something that is outside work that makes a difference to others. The meaning of life is something people have to decide for themselves.

That’s one facet regarding life, which focuses on our existence. However, there is another aspect as well, which is ingrained with our existence, and that is, growth. In this context, it is worth mentioning the words of Martin Luther, which he said aloud on April 9, 1967: “And there are three dimensions of any complete life.....length, breadth, and height.” Well, these dimensions primarily relate to our inner growth (as an individual); our outer growth (success in the outside world); and our contribution towards the society on the path of awakening as shown by the enlightened Masters of the time.

Just give a pause to the crazy race that you are engaged in every moment of your life. Check, which dimension is missing from life. On a sincere contemplation, you will find that the fundamental and underlying commonality in all the three dimensions is “Soul-awakening.” Why? It is because when we are awake at the level of our soul, we are best able to understand and explore the real meaning of the three dimensions, i.e. developing as a ‘truly civilized, moral, and wise ‘being; aiming at success in a confident and prudent manner; and, cherishing the joy in the life of selfless service, rather than constricting it in the parenthesis of I, me and myself .

RENNEL ISLAND OIL SPILL AN OVERVIEW

Joy Thattil

*Maritime Lawyer & Partner @ Callidus
Dubai, Singapore & India
joy@calliduscmc.com*

Rennell Island, one of the country's outlying islands in its southern Rennell and Bellona Province, is geographically remote with little infrastructure and few services. The Solomon Islands is part of the marine biodiversity-rich Coral Triangle and has one of the world's most important coral reef systems, home to 485 coral species and 1,019 fish species.

On February 5 2019, a Hong Kong-based bulk carrier, the MV Solomon Trader, ran aground off a remote island in the Solomon Islands. It spilled heavy fuel across coastal waters, beaches and a sensitive coral reef system not far from a UNESCO World Heritage Site., eventually spilling more than a hundred tonnes of heavy fuel oil into the ocean.

The country's president has described it as the worst man-made environmental disaster in recent times. Although the International salvage crews has now contained the oil spill, a massive clean up operation is still underway following which questions of liability and damages is also put forward. However, the scale of damage is still being reckoned. Scientists report that oil spills can kill fish and invertebrates directly, while toxic compounds can curtail coral growth and reproduction and diminish coral and fish biodiversity.

In the latest twist of events the Indonesian miner Bintan Mining Corporation, which chartered the stricken MV Solomon Trader, is suing the ship's owner King Trader Ltd. And says they were suing the shipping company as the charterer on behalf of the people of the island.

The Rennell islanders were having a hard time availing consumable water and has thence been relying on clean water shipments. The Solomon Islands Maritime Safety administration acting director Jonah Mitau said the government is looking at changes to the Shipping Act following the incident. He said currently the laws only cover safety but will be extended to cover insurance and commercial responsibility for damages.

Reports suggested the damage is estimated to be over $US50 million and the Solomon's caretaker Prime Minister Rick Hou has confirmed that a review of environmental and mining laws is needed to deal with such emergencies.

The World Heritage Centre is determined to support Solomon Islands and Australia in exploring all options to hold the responsible company, owners and insurers to account

What is an Oil spill? It is basically when large quantity of liquid petroleum hydrocarbon is released into the water bodies. Oil wastes that enter the ocean comes from various sources. These spills mainly occur due to human activities in coastal areas, shores and oceans, more specifically, the activities involving tankers carrying crude oil, drilling rigs, wells and offshore platforms. These oil spills have adverse ill effects on the ocean and the life in the ocean, which can last for decades.

The largest oil spill occurred in 1991, in Gulf of Mexico, in which around 240 million gallons of crude oil was spilled. The oil spilled in this accident went deep into the sea, burrowing up to 40cm in the sand and mudflats, it remains there to this day. This is only one example of how oil spills can be such a menace. In the year 2018 alone, six incidents of oil spill occurred, three large oil spills and three medium oil spills. The oil spill at Solomon Islands leaked 600 tonnes of heavy fuel oil, which implies that it is a medium oil spill. Even though it is a medium spill, it cannot be taken lightly, because it has occurred in one of the UNESCO World Heritage sites, which also happens to be the world's largest raised coral atoll. The spill is likely to cause long term significant damage to the coral reefs and the local ecosystem. When the corals come in contact with the oil, it can sometimes kill it directly or effect its reproduction and growth. The International Maritime Organisation is a United Nations specialised agency which focuses on the safety and security of shipping and the prevention of marine and atmospheric pollution by ships. IMO plays an important role in promoting the Sustainable Development Goals of the UN. The IMO regulates principles that can be used in situations like these.

WHO IS TOO PROFESSIONAL?

Recently we heard about someone, we'll call Alex for the purposes of this article, who was told by a successful chief executive, that they had been held back in the promotion stakes because they were seen as being 'too professional'. This tale prompted the Kaleidoscope team to consider what 'being professional' and 'too professional' was all about. Eventually we came to a conclusion, you might regard, as being one which is not generally considered.

We agreed that being professional at work is essential if you wish to be a success. Consequently, we first considered, from an employee's viewpoint, what 'being professional' might mean. Simply put the definition of 'professional' is actually a person who is engaged in a specific activity as a main paid occupation. However, being professional frequently means different things to each of us. For some it means having advanced qualifications, degrees or industry certification. For others it might mean doing a good job or being smartly dressed at work. Consequently, what is actually required to be professional can be difficult to pin down. On the flip side the requirements of a successful company, to portray themselves as being corporately professional, is well known. Such a company generates a perception of dependability, respectability, reliability, dedication and most importantly trust.

We soon realised that professionalism has two facets in the business world. There's one for the individual worker and another demanded by a company to achieve an overall corporate image. Both these distinct entities are clearly and closely inter-related. Without achieving a high standard in the former it becomes, more or less, impossible to attain the latter. Accordingly, we focused firstly on what a worker needs to do to be classed as professional.

'Professionalism' isn't about what you are wearing or the fact your hair is perfectly coiffed. Indeed, one leading UK executive, of a stock exchanged listed company, was known to chair meetings wearing a cowboy hat with boots to match! Using big or posh words, when you talk, also has nothing to do with being professional. Indeed, an individual focusing on these issues may mean that they come across as too professional. Interestingly we didn't believe this was the implication of the 'too professional' accusation levelled at Alex. Image, personality and a team spirit are important, particularly when working as a dedicated group. Nevertheless, an individual's professionalism will depend on how others assess them and not on their own judgement. Those believing they need to be somehow super professional could alienate them, as colleagues may feel that they cannot easily interact with them.

So, our bottom line is: -

Dress well so as to be comfortable.

Be yourself.

Make sure you enjoy your work.

Keep your qualifications to yourself because no one needs certificates waved in their faces.

But what drives an employee's environment? It's the need of a company to achieve a professional accolade in order to be successful. This is where, we believe Alex fell down. He failed to realise that, in focusing 100% on the needs of the company, he overlooked the different perceptions of professionalism amongst staff. Invariably a company sets out their objectives and targets on the basis that management are convinced they are credible and achievable. In doing so, they believe success will be assured as customers will appreciate dealing with a business that delivers.

But what happens when things don't progress as visualised? This is when the 'trouble-shooter' is often brought in to identify the problems. Over his career this is the position for which Alex was noted. He was so professional, to a point, that all that mattered was focusing on what the company needed to achieve success. There's nothing wrong in this you might say, but do you recall the saying,

'No matter how qualified, a poor workman always blames their tools'?

Without occasional self-checking we may all fall into such a trap. When things go wrong, we mitigate our insufficiency by passing the blame to someone or something else. Alex's role as a trouble shooter was to get to the heart of a problem, identify where such instances were happening and determine a solution. In this context Alex was 'too professional' because it meant challenging others on their professionalism. This required a tricky balancing skill to keep everyone happy.

Alex's situation underscored the meaning of professionalism and its interplay between employee and company. This led us to conclude, rather uniquely it seems, that being professional means owning what you have done, by accepting full responsibility for your actions.

True professionals will never pass the buck!

In a similar way The Kaleidoscope team stand by our conclusion. So please feel free to offer your opinions if you wish. They will be welcome.

GLOBAL SHIPPING EARNINGS SET TO INCREASE: MOODY'S

LONDON: The outlook for the global shipping sector into 2020 will remain stable as higher expected earnings are counterbalanced by US/China trade tensions and worldwide regulatory risks, says Moody's Investors Service in a sector report published recently.

The key drivers of the stable outlook are a combination of anticipated EBITDA growth of 16%-18% into 2020 (although from a relatively low base in 2018) and largely balanced demand and supply growth.

These positives are offset by downside risks from protectionist trade policies and increasing regulation.

"The global shipping industry is facing a number of challenges into 2020, including the effects of IMO 2020, which will likely lead to rising fuel costs, as well as geopolitical uncertainties, such as trade conflicts, especially the US-China trade dispute," said Maria Maslovsky, a Moody's Vice President – Senior Analyst.

The outlook on the tanker segment has turned stable from negative with charter rates rising as demand improves and oversupply becoming less of an issue as a result of reduced ordering and increased idling.

WAR RISK SURCHARGE

CMA CGM informed that after considering the recent incidents in the Strait of Hormuz and the related significantly increasing insurance costs in the Middle East Gulf region, it decided to implement a War Risk Surcharge.

The War Risk Surcharge will apply from July 5th, 2019, for all trades, except USA and China (August 1st, 2019):

From/To Oman, the UAE, Qatar, Bahrein, Saudi Arabia (Dammam and Jubail), Kuwait, Iraq.

CMA CGM added that additional countries might be added depending on the situation in the area.

This comes on the aftermath of two tanker attacks at the Strait earlier in June, which escalated the existing tension between Iran and the US.

On Thursday, 13 June, the Panamanian flagged tanker 'Kokuka Courageous' and the Marshall Islands-flagged tanker 'Front Altair', were hit in two subsequent suspected attacks in the Gulf of Oman, which left the one vessel ablaze and both adrift.

The incident came only a month after a similar incident in which four tankers were struck off Fujairah.

The US has accused Iran of being behind the attacks in the major strategic waterway for world oil supplies, which caused oil prices to surge by 4%. Iran rejects the allegation.

The US Navy has had a permanent presence in the Persian Gulf since 1949.

OMAN SHIPPING COMPANY ORDER THREE NEW VLCCS FROM DAEWOO

Oman Shipping Company (OSC), a member of the ASYAD Group, has signed an agreement with South Korea's Daewoo Shipbuilding & Marine Engineering (DSME) to build three Very Large Crude Carriers (VLCC) as part of a fleet renewal strategy.

Through its new assets, OSC says it will increase its competitive advantage in the market – providing customers with additional high-quality, economical and technologically advanced vessels.

Once operational, OSC predicts that the three VLCC newbuilds will increase company oil shipping revenues by 10 per cent. Long-term contracts with international oil majors are already in place for all ships.

Each of the vessels will be 336-meters-long and 60-meters-wide and will be able to hold 300,000 tons of cargo.

All of the new orders will also meet future environmental requirements – including IMO 2020 standards – as well as benefit from DSME's market-leading efficient-design for newbuilds.

ASYAD's OSC is an integral part of Oman's drive to become a top-ten global logistics hub, and is supporting the integration of all supply chain activities in the Sultanate – providing customers with rapid and unrivalled distribution capabilities across the Middle East, as well as acting as the region's business-sense gateway to global markets.

QUOTABLE QUOTES

It takes 20 years to build a reputation and five minutes to ruin it. If you think about that, you'll do things differently.

- Warren Buffett

The first rule of any technology used in a business is that automation applied to an efficient operation will magnify the efficiency. The second is that automation applied to an inefficient operation will magnify the inefficiency.

- Bill Gates

What we need to do is always lean into the future; when the world changes around you and when it changes against you - what used to be a tail wind is now a head wind - you have to lean into that and figure out what to do because complaining isn't a strategy.

- Jeff Bezos

The highest levels of performance come to people who are centered, intuitive, creative, and reflective - people who know to see a problem as an opportunity.
